400 MILLIONS SLASHED FROM EXPENDITURES

Biggest Cut in Government Expense Reported by Committee

HITS VETERANS

361 Millions Taken From Pensions

WASHINGTON, May 2.— The biggest slash in government expense yet made by the new administration became apparent today when the house appropriations committee reported the independent officers appropriation measure with $467,741,045 pared away from the $1,003,314,981, which it carried when it passed both houses during the last session, only to meet a pocket veto from former President Hoover.

Nearly all of the saving—$460,000,634—is made in the veterans' administration. These economies have actually already gone into effect through executive action.

The committee restored the president's salary to $75,000—purely a gesture, as President Roosevelt is reducing himself 15 per cent of that amount. Except for this item and a reduction of some $1,700 in the small fund for the federal oil conservation board, the bill follows the revised budget estimates

FUNDS ALLOTTED

No funds are provided for new activities of the federal trade commission but provision is made to complete its current inquiry into public utilities. The interstate commerce commission must sharply curtail its activities under the budget and bill figures, through dismissals, furloughs and other economies. Funds for the emergency fleet corporation are entirely eliminated.

Of the $460,000,000 in the veterans' administration, the great bulk is taken out of pensions and compensations, this figure being slashed $361,000,000.

Reps. Taber and Escon of New York and Thurston of Iowa, Republicans signed a minority report protesting the power given the president in the bill to alter or cancel mail contracts with land or water carriers. Their report said the Postmaster General already had power to cancel contracts for services no longer needed or where the taint of fraud appeared in the making.

OPPOSE CANCELLATIONS

"It is the height of absurdity for the government to take the lead in cancellations," of contracts legally and properly made, the report said.

At the same time the appropriations committee reported the third deficiency bill. The estimates were for $87,091, and the bill carries $46.891. Actually, there is only a $200 saving, the apparent saving of $40,000 being accounted for by transfers from other appropriations.

Those persons affected by the commissioners action were being notified Tuesday by Miss Gretchen Mceller, clearing house secretary.

NEW TAX PLAN OF GOV. WHITE FORMED TODAY

Six-Point Program Based Upon Sales Tax and Earned Incomes

RAISE 45 MILLIONS

Nuisance Tax Abandonment Seen as Result

COLUMBUS, May 2.—Work of drafting into bill form Governor George White's mammoth new taxation program, based on a two percent sales tax of the "coupon" type and a tax on earned incomes of $1,250 or more, was started today by the special taxation committee of the state legislature.

The new program, comprising six points, was sent to the committee by the governor last night. Designed, to raise approximately $45,000,000 annually for schools, it proposes sweeping changes in the present taxation scheme. It would reduce real estate taxes $28,000,000 a year and would set up a state-wide school system somewhat similar to the publicized Mort plan.

ABANDONS 'NUISANCE'

In submitting the amended program, Governor White abandoned almost entirely the proposed "nuisance taxes" on malt, amusements, soft drinks and tobaccos which he proposed in January.

A new cry of "nuisance taxes" went up today however—directed at the alleged "nuisance" feature of the coupons proposed for the retail sales tax. The consumer would bear this tax by purchasing coupon books issued by the state. When using a commodity, he would give a coupon in addition to the price of the article.

Farm products sold directly by farmers to consumers would be exempted from the sales tax, under the governor's plan, along with "certain essential human foods," but furniture and clothing would be taxed, as would other commodities.

The governor's six-point program, which the special committee started drafting in bill form today, is as follows:

1. The raising of $10,000,000 for poor relief in 1933 by means of a general sales tax.

2. The furnishing to all schools in Ohio, also by means of the sales tax, of the sum of $17 per elementary pupil and $29 per high school pupil to establish a minimum educational standard within the state.

3. Lowering the 15-mill real estate tax limitation to 13.15 mills by reducing the fixed levies for school purposes by 1.85 mills, thus taking a $28,000,000 burden off real estate.

4. Enacting of a state tax on earned incomes with exemptions of $1250 for single men and $2500 for married men, the rates to be 1 per cent on the first $1,000 above the exemption, 2 per cent on the next $1,000, 3 per cent on the excess.

5. Reallocation of present intangile tax proceeds to provide further relief for real estate.

6. Diversion of $2,000,000, of state highway construction fund to be used for emergency relief purposes.

UTILITY FIGHTS U. S. TAX PLAN

Electric Company Chief Tells Committee New Tax 'Burdensome.'

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The first Senate attack on the administration's budget-balancing tax bill was fired today by spokesmen for the electric power utilities, protesting against a 3 per cent tax on their business.

William J. Hagenah, Chicago attorney, told the Senate finance committee the tax would place a "crushing burden" on the industry, force higher rates and throw thousands of employes out of work. He declared the power companies would have to effect enormous economies in order to offset the tax.

The tax was imposed this year on consumers but the House transferred it in the new bill to the power companies. It was expected to bring in $39,000,000 a year.

OTHER SECTIONS

The other sections of the bill included a one cent federal tax on gasoline and an authorization for a reduction in postal rates.

Administration leaders predicted the taxes, plus increased revenues from reduced postal rates, on top of federal economies, would balance the budget.

Hagenah and other representatives of the electric power utilities bitterly assailed the proposed tax on their sales of electricity

OHIO IS FIRST TO ACT OR WORK PROGRAM

COLUMBUS, May 2.— Ohio [illegible] the first state in the [illegible] to take active steps toward [illegible] federal assistance under [illegible]sident Roosevelt's proposed [illegible]blic works program.

Flood control work is the principal feature of a gigantic state-wide work program now being [illegible] before the Roosevelt administration, with a widespread plan of [illegible] erosion prevention, reforestation and drought control as the [illegible]table outgrowth.

One of the proposed projects would provide extensive flood control in the largest drainage area in the state, the watershed formed by the Muskingum and Tuscarawas rivers.

This area, more than 8,000 square miles in size, embraces roughly 20 per cent of the state. Cost of this project alone is estimated in a preliminary survey of the section as close to 56 millions of dollars.

OTHER PROJECTS

Other proposed projects include similar work in the Hocking River Valley, 1,200 square miles in size; the 'Little Miami' valley, a 700 square mile section; the Sandusky-Sandusky waterway, a channel down the middle of the state, drainage measures at Cleveland and Springfield; the Mahoning-Beaver riverway through Youngstown; and extensive harbor and shore protection work on the shores of Lake Erie and the banks of the Ohio River.

Fred I. Rowe, chairman of the governor's work project development committee, a sub-committee of the state relief commission, has been holding conferences in Washington, going over points in the plan with a committee of five members of Ohio's delegation in congress.

The program was endorsed in principle by the entire delegation when presented recently by Adjutant-General Frank D. Henderson, chairman of the Ohio relief commission, Rowe, and two other of the 19 members in the work project development committee, H. M. Chapman, chief engineer of the state highway department, and J. G. Sours, Summit county surveyor.

J. Kane, of the state relief department, and engineering director with the committee, stated Rowe is making no specific appeal for funds, but is outlining plans in the proposed work to government officials.

WORK FOR MANY

Sponsors of the program hope that it will put to work thousands now unemployed in the state, bring about a consequent reduction in the expenditure for relief, and improvement in the conditions of the men and their families.

Cost of the work would be met from funds provided under the president's program and whatever money may be raised by local communities.

In the Muskingum-Tuscarawas valley, an association has been formed in the communities affected, so that the region may be better prepared to handle any appropriation that might be granted.

Bryce C. Growning, of Zanesville, secretary of the group, which is known as the Muskingum-Tuscarawas Valley Improvement association, and other members are attending numerous meetings at which the proposed plan is being outlined to the public.

Work will include channel and canal building, construction of reservoirs and dams, and steps toward conservation, which may lead to reforestation, soil erosion prevention, and drought control.

Counties that lie completely in the Muskingum - Tuscarawas watershed are Wayne, Holmes, Coshocton, Muskingum, Knox, Licking, Tuscarawas and Stark, while those which will be partially affected are Harrison, Belmont, Noble, Morgan, Perry, Richland, Ashland, Washington, Summit, and Medina.

In this are Akron, Canton, Mt. Vernon, Massillon, Wooster, Mansfield, New Philadelphia, Millersburg, Coshocton, Newark, Zanesville and Cambridge.

In the Little Miami area, either completely or partially affected, are the following counties: Clinton, Warren, Clermont, Highland, Brown, Hamilton, Green, Clark, and Montgomery. Cincinnati, Wilmington, Xenia, and Lebanon are in this section.

In the Hocking Valley, counties effected are Fairfield, Perry, Athens, Hocking, Morgan, and the following cities; Logan, Lancaster, New Lexington, Jacksonville, and Athens.

SCOUTERS URGED TO HEAR DR. FISHER IN TALK TONIGHT

All scouters in the Central Ohio Area Council are urged to be at the Southern Hotel, Tuesday evening, 7:30 to hear Dr. George J. Fisher, deputy chief scout executive of the United States and D. M. Ramsay, regional scout executive of region four, discuss plans for future activities of the Central Ohio Area council. Indications are that there will be over 1,000 scouters in attendance at this meeting, which will be held May 2.

The Tenth Law of the Boy Scouts reads: "A Scout is Brave." "He has the courage to face danger," this law also says. At this late date, with the Boy Scout Movement coming close to the turn of its first quarter century it is unnecessary to plead for the Movement, but it is possible once in a while, to call attention to the manner in which the Scout program actually works out in daily life. Just the other day, in Ann Arbor, Michigan, there was handed to Henry V. Aquinto, a fourteen-year-old Boy Scout, coming direct from Lord Baden-Powell, the Chief Scout of the World, the silver medal issued for gallantry by the British Boy Scouts' Association. A few days later the mails brought to Ann Arbor, to Scout Aquinto, the Gold Honor Medal for Life Saving issued by the Boy Scouts of America. Both tokens signalized recognition of an outstanding act of bravery. The story is not without interest. Aquinto was in Linlithgow, Scotland, last summer visiting his grandparents. One night in the Fifth of Forth, off Blackness Castle, he saved one youth from drowning, and helped to save another. Then he revived both by the methods of artificial respiration, taught him as a Scout.

Unusual as the circumstances of this double award are, they in nowise differ radically from the hundreds of cases of valiant self-sacrifice on the part of Boy Scouts, found in the records of the organization, which last year awarded 23 gold medals for life saving and recorded many more thoroughly authenticated outstanding instances of heroism and bravery. There is nothing finer in all the annals of chivalry than these stories of bravery by Boy Scouts, many of whom are just entering their teens. There is the spirit of true knighthood - forgetfulness of self in service to others.

old he showed exceptional talent for the cornet and became a pupil of William J. Kopp, noted trumpeter of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. Later he was brought to the attention of the eminent cornet teacher and military band expert, Herman Bellstedt. Simon developed with marked rapidity and became known as the "boy wonder of the cornet." His first professional engagement was as a soloist with Kopp's Cincinnati Band. Later he was called to Weber's Prize Band of America as feature soloist.

JOINED SOUSA

"Acclaimed as a front rank virtuoso, Frank Simon was offered the assistant solo position with the Sousa Band, where for a few years he shared honors with the celebrated Herbert L. Clarke. When Mr. Clarke left to organize his own band, Simon became the premier soloist and assistant conductor of the great Sousa Band. It was during this time that he won for himself the enviable reputation of "America's Foremost Cornetist."

"Ambitious to create a great band of his own, Frank Simon was induced by the management of the American Rolling Mill Company of Middletown, Ohio, to organize and conduct their band. That was twelve years ago, and after hard work and perseverance, and by accepting only the finest musicians to become comrades in this work, he succeeded in building up one of the finest symphonic bands in America.

"With the Armco Band, Simon appeared at many engagements of national and international significance. In 1928 his organization had the honor of representing the United States musically at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto. The band has also been heard on tour; the Ohio State Fair and other engagements of importance. Then, four years ago, came the radio. In view of the former brilliant achievements of their band and conductor, Armco decided to feature its own musical voice on the air. The exacting demands of broadcasting inspired Conductor Simon with greater enthusiasm. He determined that his band would merit its place in the very front rank of musical organizations on the air. A period of reconstruction took place; the band rapidly took on a strictly professional status. Today Frank Simon and his Armco Band is composed of a group of brilliant musicians and ranks among the greatest bands of the world.

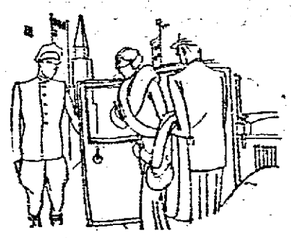
IT'S TIME to Face these FACTS

Don't blind yourself to the fact that you are not really saving money when you buy cheap goods. Low price may seem to fit into your plan of cutting down expenses but after a short while you are brought to a realization that there is no genuine economy in goods that won't stand up in either appearance or service.

You'll buy less often if you buy Quality goods and you'll get more satisfaction and enjoyment while they are serving you. Part of the satisfaction you get out of any investment is pride of possession and the fact that you've exercised good judgment. Quality really begins to demonstrate these things about the time that cheap goods begin to develop disappointment.

QUALITY MAKES SAVINGS SAFE AND SERVICE CERTAIN



Many of the merchants of this town have stood steadfast on their quality standards throughout the entire period of cheap merchandise demand, sacrificing volume business to quality ideals; preferring to keep faith with their patrons' interests rather than to compromise their reputation for merchandise of integrity. It is at the instance of such stores and the interest of the public in general that this series of "Quality Facts" is published.

Something to Say

—not just saying something

A friend of CHESTERFIELD writes us of a salesman who had "something to say":

"I dropped into a little tobacco shop, and when I asked for a pack of Chesterfields the man smiled and told me I was the seventh customer without a break to ask for Chesterfields. 'Smoker after smoker,' he said, 'tells me that Chesterfields click . . . I sell five times as many Chesterfields as I did a while back.'"

Yes, there's something to say about Chesterfields and it takes just six words to say it—"They're mild and yet they satisfy."

Is the "Curse" Real?

WITH so many changes taking place in all spheres of human relations, it probably should cause no surprise that science finds has given a shadow of substance to what formerly it regarded as a supersitition relating to Egyptian royal tombs.

The "curse," which these ancient resting places of dead rulers long have been reputed to bear, may be much more real than cautious students of such things have considered possible according to the late Dr. Fenton B. Turck, of New York. The latter, in a posthumous scientific volume recently published, claimed to have made a discovery which may furnish a rational explanation of the illness and deaths several in recent years. Dr. Turck's book was published the scientific world looked upon such fatalities as being due to natural and well understood causes, rather than as having their origin in any "curse" or magic ... hored by the tombs.

THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE

by WARWICK DEEPING

SYNOPSIS

Dr. John Wolfe, young and capable assistant of the inefficient old Dr. Montague Threadgold, is shocked at the pollution he finds everywhere in the little town of Navestock. The young doctor's greatest obstacle in trying to better conditions is the bitter resentment of the people themselves. The affable Threadgold appears more interested in humoring his patients and fattening his purse than he is in curing their ills. He cautions Wolfe against using necessary "expensive" medicines when the "ordinary" preparations will do. Wolfe would be tempted to give up if it were not for lovely, young Jess Mascall, whose sincerity and courageous outlook are an incentive to keep fighting. Filled with curiosity as to how Wolfe spends his time, Mrs. Threadgold searches his room and finds a map he has prepared showing Navestock's polluted areas. She informs her husband of what she calls Wolfe's "gross disloyalty and underhand spying" and suggests that her husband either make him discontinue his researches or discharge him. Wolfe is summoned to a case of sunstroke in the "Pardons" fields, the estate of the wealthy Brandons, where he meets beautiful Mrs. Brandon. Her bored, lifeless attitude puzzles him.

CHAPTER TWENTY

The Rev. Robert Flemming was making an infusion of quassia for the benefit of the green fly on his roses, when Jasper Turrell was shown into the rector's study. Flemming, like many country parsons, was a man with a multitude of hobbies, and a friend might find him at work at his carpenter's bench, ankle-deep in shavings, or forking potatoes in his vegetable garden, or busy making trout flies with his big, but dexterous fingers. His study was a long, low, pleasant room, its big French windows looking like painted panels let into the wall, each with its glimpse of sleek grass, flower borders piled high with colour, grey old walls, and splendid trees. Pleasant disorder prevailed here. Fishing-rods, butterfly-nets, guns, a bow, and walking-sticks were piled in the corners. The book-shelves held not only books, but collectors' boxes, cork spreaders for setting butterflies and moths, fishing-reels, canvas bags, a hunting crop, and gloves. Disorder prevailed also over the rector's desk. Sermons, florists' catalogues, bills, circulars, pamphlets, fly-books, odd knives, and pipes lay as they pleased. The carpet, that had been worn to no colour in particular, had a big hole in the centre of the floor.

It was the room of a man who led a large, pleasant, placid life, a man who read old books, preached his old sermons, and was an expert in the matter of wild life and of flowers. Turrell found him kneeling on the hearth-rug in front of a fire of chips and broken wood, stewing up his infusion of quassia in a big black saucepan. As he knelt, his boots showed two worn places at the treads. He had taken off his coat, and the sleeves of his grey flannel shirt were rolled up to his elbows.

"Good heavens, Flemming, that's a nice game for a day like this! Why don't you let your cook do it?"

"It's not soup."

"That makes it worse. Jove! It's the hottest day this year."

The brewer put his white top-hat on the desk, sat down in an armchair, spread himself, and wiped his forehead. The two patches of colour on his face, shaped like the wings of a butterfly, stood out red and injected. His sandy hair looked clammy, his eyelids pink along their edges.

"What's that stuff, Flemming?"

"Quassia."

"Green fly, eh? I can't get my chaps to syringe properly. When I rate 'em, they always say that the glass and the grass take all their time. I've never yet had a man I could trust."

The rector settled the saucepan on the fire, and got up. He was a very big man, grey-haired, slow, and a little sleepy, his massive, fresh-coloured face healthy as the face of a boy. His blue eyes moved slowly, and dwelt a long time upon any object they happened to notice, like the eyes of a man who had never been hurried. Grave, pleasant tranquillity possessed his face. Robert Flemming was an aristocrat even in the thick of his hobbies and his old clothes. He had something of the grand manner, a quiet, drowsy graciousness that reflected the calm of a quiet, drowsy life.

"Eighty-three in the shade yesterday."

"It's more today. Nearer ninety, I should imagine."

Jasper Turrell lay back at his ease. For many years he and Robert Flemming had shared in the life of Navestock town. They were fellow-citizens rather than friends, accustomed to meet here, there, and everywhere, to share in the patriarchal government of the place, to administer justice, and to deal with the poor. Robert Flemming was chairman of the Navestock Board of Guardians, and Turrell the people's church-warden at St. Jude's Church.

"I hear there was a case of sun stroke at 'Pardons' last week."

"Yes, the man recovered."

"Threadgold's assistant pulled him through."

Turrell stretched out his legs and stared at the toes of his boots.

"We shall have trouble with that young man, Flemming."

"Oh!"

The rector took his coat from a chair and hunched himself into it, wrinkling up the cloth across his back.

"What makes you think that?"

"Officious young fool."

"I haven't come into touch with him. Besides, he's only an understrapper——"

"Exactly. A question of putting him in his place, or getting Threadgold to shift him, if necessary. We don't want that kind of man in the town, Flemming."

"What annoys you?"

"He's one of those fellows who can't mind their own business, meddlesome and dictatorial. I'm not a man to be dictated to."

The rector nodded.

"Of course not."

Turrell sat up with a jerk, as though his indignation straightened like a bent spring.

"You know the kind of people we are, Flemming: we like to go our own way, and work in our own way. We are independent, shrewd, strong-willed. We don't like being talked to or interfered with. We manage our own affairs in our own fashion, and I'm not accustomed to being yapped at by a puppy."

Flemming picked up a pipe from his desk, and began to fill it from the tobacco jar on the mantelshelf.

"Has Threadgold's youngster been yapping?"

"He has tried it; I'm not the old dog to stand that."

"But what about?"

"The property here. As if I hadn't managed property before he was born. His officiousness doesn't come your way."

Flemming gave one of his sleepy, thoughtful stares.

"No. But you say ——?"

"I had to put the fellow in his place. He was beginning to give me instructions."

"Was he, indeed!"

"No sense of humor in the cub, Flemming, no sense of humour."

He broke off with an irritable, rattling laugh, showing his teeth and glaring. Flemming had lit his pipe. He stood on the hearth-rug, feet spread, hands behind his back. His face expressed the heavy surprise of a quiet and placid-tempered man who was asked to be angry about something that appeared utterly unimportant. Turrell was hot-tempered, touchy, and vindictive, but the rector saw that Wolfe had angered him pretty seriously.

"I don't see ——"

"Confound it, Flemming, suppose ing some youngster came and told you that you ought to alter your sermons, or have your church reseated?"

Flemming smiled, his healthy face pleasantly amused.

"I don't think that would bother me."

"You are too good-tempered a man. I'm not; if I see a cub I must kick him. Well, let's leave it at that. I dropped in to ask when you want to have your summer school treat. You can have one of my fields."

"Thanks."

"Mrs. Turrell will provide the tea, and all that sort of stuff. We shall be away part of August, and I want you to fix the date."

"Supposing I fix the first Wednesday in August?"

"That will suit us. Do you remember last year? By George, what a day it was! Talk about Providence and the weather!"

Robert Flemming puffed steadily at his pipe. He stared at the hole in the carpet with the far away look of one who has discovered a skull of some old friend.

"Do you care to come and see my roses?"

Turrell acquiesced.

"I wish you would come up some time and convince my man Wall that he's a fool."

Flemming looked quizzically at the bowl of his pipe.

"One of the most difficult things in the world, sir. If a stranger came into the town and asked for the Fool, we should all of us send him next door."

When the brewer had gone, his white top-hat bobbing above the laurel hedge, where the public path ran between St. Jude's churchyard and the rectory garden, Robert Flemming loitered among his roses, cutting off dead blooms and taking some of the choicest flowers in between two fingers in order to set them with the quiet delight of an expert. But there was not that pleasant abandonment in his movements that characterized his idle moments among his flowers. He would pause and stare at nothing in particular, sometimes rubbing a leaf between finger and thumb or snipping at the air with his gardening scissors.

It could not be said that Robert Flemming had either love or respect for Jasper Turrell. He was part of Navestock, and as such Flemming had accepted him, and ceased to be piqued by anything the brewer did. People may be classed with poisons, small doses given at frequent intervals producing immunity and no violent reaction. Flemming had come to Navestock as a man of forty. He had lived in the town some twenty years and had sunk into it like a big and rather indolent man into a comfortable bed. Outside the walls of his garden Flemming was not much of an observer. He had a mind that took things for granted, kindly, patient, not given to asking questions. Evil existed, and he had long ago accepted it as part of the mystical scheme of life. Death, pain, and poverty were stones strung upon the rosary of his religion. They were facts which he had learned to look at through the golden haze of a mellow mysticism.

Avoid the Menace of Apoplexy

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

RECENTLY AN eminent physician published an interesting and instructive report on the subject of cerebral hemorrhage. I will not burden you with the figures of his extensive study. The report shows that cerebral hemorrhage, or "apoplexy", as it is more commonly called, continues to be a serious menace.

Dr. Copeland

Apoplexy, or "stroke", is due to a rupture of a small artery in the brain. If severe hemorrhage takes place, pressure of the blood on the brain will cause the victim to become unconscious. If the hemorrhage is mild and little blood is lost, the afflicted individual recovers. But usually some form of paralysis results from the hemorrhage.

Take Stock of Yourself

The paralysis may be mild, involving an arm or leg. In other cases, where the stroke has been more severe, complete paralysis of one side of the body occurs. The side involved is deprived of power of motion and sensation, with a general feeling of numbness.

When the hemorrhage occurs on the right side of the brain, there is a paralysis of the left side of the body. If the hemorrhage is on the left side of the brain, the paralysis occurs on the right side of the body. This is explained by a crossing of the nerve fibers at the base of the brain. If the hemorrhage is profuse or if it involves the base of the brain, both sides of the body are afflicted. In such cases recovery is doubtful.

It is a good thing to take stock of ourselves once in a while. I am confident that as a result of this report and other surveys, increased efforts will be made to reduce the frequency of cerebral hemorrhage. Please bear in mind that apoplexy is not a disease in and of itself. It is the result of continued negligence of certain disorders of the body.

This condition is usually seen in persons beyond the age of fifty. It rarely occurs in young adults. The rupture or escape of blood into the brain is associated with such defects as high blood pressure, arteriosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, heart disease and kidney disease. Since these are largely preventable, many of the deaths from cerebral hemorrhage could have been avoided if necessary precautions had been taken.

No unreasonable demands should ever be placed upon the body. It should not be called upon for overwork when it is tired.

The victims of apoplexy are usually those who failed to heed the warnings given by nature. Many sufferers from high blood pressure are careless in their mode of living. Victims of hardening of the arteries ignore such symptoms as dizziness, sleeplessness, mental irritability or impairment of memory. Apoplexy may be the result. No one will deny that the onset of these cases is dependent upon the extent of the original disease. The willingness of the patient to follow the advice of the attending physician will result in removing the danger of having brain hemorrhage.

Coming to The Cliftona Theatre

Constance Bennett and Ben Lyons in a scene from "Lady With a Past," at the Cliftona Theatre, Wednesday, one day only.

AT THE GRAND

Four screen stars and a dancing and singing chorus of beautiful women in settings that are the last word in lavishness are features of the Fox comedy, "Hot Pepper," depicting the most recent adventures of the immortal Marines, Quirt and Flagg, which is showing at the Grand Theatre.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Constance Bennett is learning about life from motion pictures.

The child of luxury knows what it is to work until exhausted. The wealthy girl has experienced the pinch of poverty. And for "Lady With a Past," her new RKO-Pathe starring picture, coming to the Cliftona Theatre Wednesday (for one day only), the glamorous, popular beauty discovered what it means to be a wallflower.

Born with a silver spoon in her mouth, Miss Bennett rejected it when she was old enough to make a choice. Richard Bennett, her stage star father, has made his talents yield him sufficient to give his family everything. In Constance's case, everything included education in private schools of New York and Paris, a brilliant social debut, and the opportunity for a gay, luxurious and idle existence.

Broadened Outlook

She accepted the education because she couldn't very well help herself, went through the debut because she enjoyed doing so, but turned down the other glittering prospect because she wanted to see more than one side of life.

In choosing the screen as a teacher, she picked a stern and thorough one. A shop girl leaving her counter day after day during the Christmas rush could be no more weary than Constance Bennett is after eight hours of work on a film set at the RKO Pathe studio. The screen exacts a tremendous toll in physical, mental and emotional energy from its favorites and gives no reckoning to wealth or social standing.

About three-fourths of the taxes paid in Ohio are levied against property, although not one cent of the taxes levied against real estate is used for operating the state government.

Farm population in Ohio now stands at 1,085,000, according to the estimates of P. G. Beck of the department of rural economics, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station. This is an increase, he says, of approximately 81,000 in less than four years.

Heise's Hurling, 23 Bingles Rout Loop Champs

MINNEAPOLIS, May 2.—The Columbus Red Birds had everything yesterday from an excellent young southpaw mound artist to a base-hit hungry bunch of sluggers and as a result the Millers were trampled 15-1 in the second of the three game series.

Clarence Heise, crooked-arm hurler brought up from Elmira in the New York-Pennsylvania league where he set a strike-out record, had the league champions under control at all times. Their only run was scored in the first inning when Spencer Harris doubled and came over on Art Dible's single. The only other hit off Bancroft-men counted was Harris' single in the third frame. After that inning the Millers had two men on base, both through walks.

WILSON IN FORM

Heise not only was tough but had splendid support. Charlie Wilson and Buck Slade, second base and shortstop combination, performed to perfection and the outfield did well Hal Anderson, formerly of St. Paul, grabbing eight fly balls, several of them difficult chances.

With the exception of Nick Cullop the entire batting order was hot. Art Shires, of the great 47, found his batting eye and clouted a home run and three singles. Blades a double and three singles, Delancey three singles, Slade a double and two singles and Riggs a double and single. Anderson and Heise singled once. In all the Birds had 23 hits.

The series will come to an end today with Vandenburg expected to chuck for the Millers. Manager Blades, of Columbus, was not certain of his starting moundsman with Bill Lee to work if his arm is all right. Otherwise it may be Jim Lindsey, up from the Cadinals, or Paul Dean.

In the other league game Milwaukee climbed to first place by defeating Indianapolis.

47 ENTER RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, May 2.—Forty-seven entries were announced today for the annual 500-mile auto classic to be held on May 30.

All types of automobiles have been entered for the speed grind, including rear, front and four wheel drives and several types of motors.

Although midnight was the deadline for mailing entries the directors predicted that the total will reach 60.

In order to qualify for the 21st running of the motor derby the entrants must reel off a speed of 100 miles an hour over a 25 mile run. Only 42 will be permitted starting places.

Two former winners, Louie Meyer of California and Louis Schneider of Indianapolis, have entered eight-cylinder conventional rear drive cars. Meyer won the classic in 1928 and Schneider in 1931.

COURT AVAILABLE FOR TENNIS MEETS

The Circleville Racquet club has opened its court to township schools desiring to use it for inter-school matches. There have been several requests for the court and it is expected some interesting tournaments will be played there soon.

By playing on the Circleville court neither team has an "at home" advantage. Also, the Park Place court is regulation size and one of the fastest clay courts in this section.

While the Racquet Club rents the court for such use, the fee is very nominal, and officials can be furnished if desired. For reservations call Sterling M. Lamb, club treasurer.

COUNTY GIRL AIDS SPORTS CARNIVAL

LOCAL BOWLING 5S TO INVADE LONDON

The second of inter-city bowling matches to be held between local bowlers and those of London is scheduled to be held Wednesday evening at London, with two teams journeying from this city to the Madison-co seat.

The men's team as tentatively composed is; Bob Maloney, Charles Hax, Oakley Warner, George Leist and Willis Liston, while three of the ladies' team have been definitely decided upon and they are: Evelyn Adkins, Grace Bower and Marian Lutz.

In the previous match which was held in Circleville the local men's team emerged the winner while the ladies did not do so well and dropped their game by a narrow margin.

CHOCOLATE WINS

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—Kid Chocolate, of Cuba, had no trouble defending his junior lightweight title against Johnny Farr, Cleveland, in their 10-round bout here last night. Chocolate, back to the ring wars after an enforced vacation in Havana, started slowly but finished with a rush to win the decision. He floored Farr three times in the last round.

When German Empire Was Formed

Before the Franco-Prussian war, in 1870-71, Germany was not a united country, but consisted of a number of states, of which Prussia was the most powerful. It was after the war and mainly due to the labors of Bismarck that the German empire was formed, a consolidation of the former German states.

4 KILLED IN HOUSE BLAZE

ROCKWOOD, Me., May 2.—Two women and two children were burned to death in their home here today as result of an attempt to start a fire with gasoline.

The victims were Mrs. Selina Burke, 84, bedridden; Mrs. Fred Burke, 31, and the latter's two children, Stephen, 5, and Walter, three months.

Another child, Fred Jr., 2, escaped when he was tossed from a window, with his hair and clothing aflame, by an uncle, Joseph Burke, who had poured the gasoline on a fire in the kitchen stove.

Burke jumped out the window after the child and smothered the flames enveloping the youngster.

Although covered with the flaming liquid, when the gasoline can exploded, the mother tried to run upstairs to rescue the other two children.

WEALTH IN FOUR GRAMS

Two husky policemen were on guard as one-fourth of a teaspoon of radium was moved from one building to another in Chicago's loop district. Milton Loevy is shown with container holding the four grams of radium valued at $250,000. The precious element was in the form of radium sulphate, radium chloride and platinum, contained in tubes, needles and a special solution. The company which owns the radium was moving its offices.

The MONTHS IN HISTORY

BY MARY McM. JONES.

May, the fifth month of our year was third of the old Roman calendar. The name is of doubtful origin—one theory is that it was named for Maia the mother of Mercury, to whom the Romans were accustomed to sacrifice on the first day of the month. In the Roman Catholic church, May is known as the month of Mary.

It is probable that the observance of May Day may be traced to the same source.

A very ancient custom is still observed, people going Maying to welcome the Advent of Spring. At one time it was customary to plant a May pole, trim it with flowers and gay streamers around which youths of the village danced. We do not often see a May pole now, but in many places a pretty girl is chosen and crowned queen of the May. Many of us recall the poem—once so popular as school recitation—

"If you're waking call me early
Call me early mother dear.
For tomorrow'll be the gladdest day
Of all the glad new year, mother
The maddest, merriest day
For I'm to be Queen of the May, mother
I'm to be Queen of the May."

Among the Romans it was considered unlucky to be married during the month of May. So far as my experience goes it does not seem to be more unlucky than any other month in the year. Another pretty custom was hanging a basket of flowers on the knob of the front door where it might be found early May Day morning.

May was a rather eventful month in our history—Dewey won a victory over Spain at Manila, May 1, 1898, thus breaking Spain's power in the Western world. On the fourth of May, 1904, work was commenced on the Panama Canal. On May 7, 1915, the Lusitania was torpedoed and sunk by Germany with great loss of life. May 28, 1917, the first U. S. troops sailed for France, our first participation in the troubles of the old world.

The second Sunday in May was set aside by designation of Congress as "Mother's Day" and the President was requested to issue a proclamation calling on government officials to display the flag of the U. S. on public buildings and asking the people to display the flag at their homes as "a public expression of our love and reverence for the mothers of our country." This President Wilson did and it has been the custom observed by each president since.

The idea for Mother's Day originated with Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia, and was first observed in that city May, 1907. She selected the carnation as an emblem because of its sweetness, purity and endurance. Everybody was requested to wear a carnation on that day. Pink in honor of a living mother, white for the dead.

May 30, 1368, was formally set aside as a day sacred to the hearts of all true Americans, when we honor our dead who fought that we might enjoy the Union. It was established after the Civil War, but takes in all those who gave their life for the country in any of the wars from the Revolution to the World War and it should be kept sacred to the memory of these heroes—let the graves of other friends pass by on that day in the year and keep true to the principle intended when the day was inaugurated.

RHODE ISLAND WET

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 2.—Little Rhody, which never had ratified the 18th amendment, today had swung into line along with Michigan and Wisconsin in voting emphatically for repeal.

Complete tabulation of yesterday's referendum in the first New England state to vote on the question showed that all 31 repealist delegates to a state convention on May 8 were elected, the "drys" failing to elect a single candidate. The final vote stood: 150,244 wet and 20,874 dry.

Only one town voted dry—Hopkinton by the narrow margin of 17 votes.

PERFIDIOUS SAVAGES

In the Torres Straits Islands in the East Indies, there are no trees suitable for canoe building. So the natives, a cruel, treacherous race, import their canoes from the Fly River Delta in New Guinea — another place with an unenviable reputation. The distance between these two places is over four hundred miles, and no native in that region travels even one-quarter of that distance.

When a canoe is wanted, the word is simply passed on from tribe to tribe. On the strength of this vague order a cance is built. Then it is relayed back. Each tribe of bloodthirsty cannibals tests and discusses it before passing it on. Finally the payment, shell necklaces, spear points, arm bands makes its way to the canoe builders in the same leisurely fashion.

There is reason for this honesty in savages to whom perfidy is natural. If any of the parties in this complicated transaction were to risk being dishonest, their credit would be ruined. And though these natives may kill and eat each other, they hold barter inviolate.

Even savages understand that in commerce it pays to be honest, and to let the world realize your honesty! So in modern business. Advertising must be honest. It is a proof of honesty. A product's advertising is the best guarantee of its quality, usefulness and value.

The man who advertises is inviting your inspection. He is letting his goods stand on their own merit. He can't afford to deceive you. You can depend on him. That's why it pays to read advertising and to buy advertised goods.

Two Composers Studied At Last Monday Club Meeting

The Monday club closed its year's work with an evening devoted to the study of the music of Sir William Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan, Monday. Mrs. G. G. Leist read a paper on the lives and works of these unique artists.

Mrs. Leist said, "Sir William Gilbert was supposed to be the descendant of Sir Humphrey Gilbert, the English navagator. He was incomparably the most gifted humorist of his day, and a master of paradox.

"Sir Arthur Sullivan was the son of a band master and showed unusual musical talent at an early age. Contrasting with Gilbert, his was a morose, sullen disposition and this was reflected in his oratoriors. He had an uncommon fund of melody, but it was the humorous satirist who was no musician himself, but gave the polished lyrics that coaxed from him music of such exquisite beauty. He developed a rollicking, rippling, laughing melody that no one has been able to equal in succeeding years.

"The great feature of the Gilbert and Sullivan works is their rythmical elegance. This has placed them in a class apart. Their's is one of the outstanding partnerships of genius. The association of a gifted dramatist and a gifted genius gave the world an art than which there is nothing quite so perfect in its sphere, and which admits no equal. Their melodies have been sung for more than fifty years. They have taken their place among the classics of the stage."

Solos from Pinafore were sung. Miss Helen Marion sang "Buttercups' Song" and Mrs. Clark Will rendered "Sorry Her Lot."

Mrs. Leist read a resume of the Mikado and the following numbers from it were sung:

"Comes a Train of Little Ladies" by the Monday club chorus directed by Mrs. Clark Will.

"Three Little Maids from School" was sung by Mrs. Will, Miss Helen Marion, Mrs. Evan Reicheldorfer and the chorus.

A quintet composed of Miss Mary Radcliffe, Miss Ann Bennett, Mrs. Barton Deming, Mrs. Evan Reicheldorfer and Mrs. James Moffitt, supplemented by the chorus sang "So Please You Sir."

"Braid the Raven Hair" was rendered by Miss Marion and the chorus and Mrs. Harry Heffner sang "The Morn and I."

Mrs. Will and the chorus sang "The Flowers that Bloom in the Spring," followed by "Katishan's Song" by Mrs. Moffitt.

Miss Ann Bennett sang "Tit-Willow" and Mrs. Leist read the story of "The Pirates of Penzance" and one of the songs from this opera were given.

Mrs. Moffitt rendered "Ruth's Song" and the chorus sang "Climbing Over Rocky Mountains." This was followed by "Poor Wandering One" and "O Dry the Glistening Tear" by Miss Mary Radcliffe and the chorus.

The program closed with the well-known number "With Catlike Tread" sung by Mrs. Harry Heffner and the chorus.

Only a few are able to enjoy listening to grand opera, but every one can enjoy Gilbert and Sullivan and it was a real treat to the club and their guests to hear again the delightful melodies, so well rendered by the chorus, the soloists and Miss Abbe M. Clarke, accompanist.

During the business meeting preceding the program, the annual reports of the officers and chairmen of committees were read.

Crooner's Estranged Wife to Fight $100,000 Suit for Alienation of Adagio Dancer's Affections by Mate Whose Existence He Can't Recall.

GARY LEON FAY WEBB VALLEE RUDY VALLEE

It is all very strange, and at first had all the earmarks of a publicity stunt, but with the filing of a $100,000 alienation of affections suit against her, Mrs. Fay Webb Vallee, estranged wife of Crooner Rudy Vallee, is back in the news columns after she had left them—and Rudy—to live happily ever after in her Santa Monica, Cal., home. The plaintiff in the suit, filed in the New York Supreme Court, is Mrs. Garfield Leon, nee Kathleen Smythe, an actress, who charges that Mrs. Vallee did "wilfully and maliciously" gain the affections of Gary Leon, vaudeville adagio dancer, her husband. But Mr. Leon, when informed of the suit, stopped his adagioing long enough to tell the world that he has no wife, hence the mystery. Mrs. Vallee, exhorted by her dad, Police Chief Clarence Webb, of Santa Monica, returned an indignant denial of the charges, asserting she will fight to "the last ditch" and characterizing the suit as "preposterous and ridiculous, but amusing." Meanwhile, Rudy, the hubby she left behind her, refuses to comment. He goes about his sax-tooting and soulful crooning as of yore, returning neither a yea nor a nay to all questions pertaining to his estranged "Girl of My Vagabond Dreams." According to reports at the time of the Vallees' last parting, Rudy is to pay Fay $100 a week, pending a final settlement of their marital affairs, which, say the gossips, will be in Reno. But Rudy and Fay emphatically deny any intention of taking their troubles to the divorce court.

LAST RITES FOR MISS DENNIS HELD

Memorial services for Miss Minnie B. Dennis, for a number of years a teacher in the Ashville public schools, who passed away Saturday in White Cross hospital were held at the M. E. church in that village Monday at 2 p. m. and were attended by a large crowd of sorrowing neighbors and friends.

The body was removed from the late home Monday at 10 a. m. and taken to the church where it lay in state until the afternoon services.

The pupils of the schools in charge of their teachers marched to the church in a body and took their last sorrowful leave of a friend who had instructed more pupils than any teacher in the history of the Ashville schools.

Rev. H. H. Glick, of the Ashville Lutheran church, a neighbor and close friend, assisted by Rev. W. Newton Mantle of the M. E. church, had charge of the services and in deference to the expressed desires of the deceased who had left minute details of the last sad rites they were of the most simple nature.

The grade presided over by Miss Dennis until her last illness, in charge of Miss Nellie Warner, substitute teacher, attended the services in a body.

Five members of the Ashville board of education, C. J. Rockey, G. C. Cline, Harry Rhodes, J. R. Hedges and Peter Johnson, and Superintendent C. A. Higley, officted as pall bearers. Interment in charge of E. F. Schlegel was made in the cemetery at Mt. Sterling.

NEWS OF HOMES AND HOME FOLKS

VOL. 4. NO. 18 Published by STEVENSON'S Tuesday, May 2, 1933

We're all trying our best to keep down expenses right now. One way to do it is to buy good goods. For instance, the price of our natural gas is just the same that has been for several years, but folks are complaining about their high gas bills. Isn't it because we find them harder to pay with our present incomes? Here's a way to cut down those bills: Buy a modern gas range one with insulated and heat-controlled oven and with modern burners placed at the proper distance from the cooking vessels. In other words, buy an ESTATE.

One day last week, a resident of Roundtown — Union-st — dropped into our store and asked about the ESTATE line of gas ranges. We showed her one at $82.25 and another one at a higher price. We tried our very best to close the sale right there, but she could not be convinced, evidently. A day or two later, she walked in and asked us to hold the better one for her until she was ready for it. Now, that lady will begin to save on her gas bills just as soon as she starts to use this new range.

There's a family out on E. Mound that will be walking on air from now on. At least, they'll think that they are. And their rug will wear them longer, too. They had us deliver one of those soft hair rug cushions one day last week. Why don't you put one under your rug?

House-cleaning time is here! Why not keep your furniture and wood-work clean from now on with some of our furniture polish?

You haven't forgotten to give those sweet-peas, roses, and vines something on which to climb, have you? You can purchase a trellis for your rose bush for as little as 90 cents, made of spruce and painted pure white.

Over in Amanda lives a lady that will very soon have a new Axminster carpet—covering her floor from wall to wall—in her "every-day" living room. Under her carpeting, will be hair cushions. All of this was sold by this store and will be laid by us. No matter how oddly your room may be shaped, we'll have a carpet made to fit it.

Owing to the high temperature on Saturday, we thought that some of you country folks might be interested to know that our Pyrofax gas outfits keep the cook cool in more ways than one, especially if you use an Estate gas range with insulated oven. You don't have to live close to a gas main line to enjoy gas cooking and baking. With Pyrofax gas, any country home may enjoy that most convenient of fuels for cooking and baking—GAS.
